SPEAKERS

Joel E. Brown is a member of the firm's Construction & Procurement and Government Contracts practice groups. Joel advises primarily large general contractors and defense contractors regarding claim preparation, defense, and compliance issues. He has advised federal contractors regarding TINA, FCA, and other compliance and regulatory issues related to government contracting. He is experienced in drafting and negotiating complex contracts, and has extensive experience in trials, arbitrations, and board appeals. He has prepared several claims worth tens of millions of dollars and has coordinated subcontractor pass-through claims.

Douglas L. Patin practices with the firm's Construction & Procurement Practice Group and also has an extensive non-construction government contracts practice. While his litigation work has involved the spectrum of traditional construction and government contract disputes, he has developed a specialized expertise in various aspects of construction and government contract law including: builder's risk and liability insurance disputes; bid protests; take-over surety issues; jury trials; and complex litigation. He has been rated among the leading construction lawyers in Washington, D.C. by the publishers of Chambers USA - American Leading Lawyers for Business, in their 2004 - 2007 editions.

David K. Taylor is a Member of the firm's Litigation group and practices primarily in commercial litigation, including construction and real estate litigation, arbitration and mediation. He is listed in The Best Lawyers in America® 2009 for his construction law and alternative dispute resolution practices and the Nashville Business Journal's Best of the Bar for construction (2006) and litigation (2007). David is a member of the Nashville, Tennessee and American (Member, Arbitration and Construction Law Forum) Bar Associations and the current Chair of the TBA Construction Law Section.
